THOUGHT and COMMENT

CURIOSITY

Curiosity may have killed the cat but there are still a great number of people who would like to know what it was the cat was trying to find out.

We were reminded of this old bromide yesterday afternoon while observing the crowd hanging over the fence at the location of the new Mercantile Trust Bank Building, Tenth street and Macdonald avenue.

Excavations seem to have an uncanny fascination for the idler and it is seldom that a steam shovel is in operation excavating for a foundation or a basement that one cannot see a group of hangers-on.

At least twenty-five persons were watching the work of the shovel yesterday afternoon at one time. We wondered just what they saw, or expected to see—that must be the solution.

They expect to see something unusual happen. Maybe they thought the steam shovel might bring up the remains of some old Indian warrior buried in that vicinity—maybe they expected one of the adjacent buildings to cave in, but the contractors seem to have forestalled that by putting supports under the buildings that did not have the proper foundations to withstand the extra strain caused by the excavation.

Only a block away a building, the Richmond Community Hotel is nearing completion and offers a great deal more in the scenic line for those interested in buildings—but the curious seem to find more in a big hole in the ground. Maybe there is a lesson in that. Funny world isn't it?

Herring left this city at 2 o'clock on Wednesday with a passenger. Somewhere along the route to Winters Island, the passenger disembarked. It is thought that Herring felt an attack of illness coming and he ran his boat into a sheltering cove.

Friends, alarmed at his absence, instituted a search and early this afternoon his body was found, upright, his hands closed upon the wheel of the speed boat.

This works a considerable hardship on the city employees and all taxpayers who have not already paid their taxes are requested to make their returns as promptly as possible.

Strike Branded as Blunder by Speaker

(By Universal Service)
LONDON, May 6.—Sir John Simon, former cabinet minister and one of England's greatest constitutional lawyers speaking in the House of Commons tonight branded the general strike as illegal and a tragic blunder.

No cases of major ailments were found and it was found that the children suffering from the minor disorders could be treated and cured before school opens.

Milk Permit Is Rescinded By the City

Health Department Rescinds Permit of W. Moderious of The Alameda Creamery

Dr. R. R. Root, city veterinarian, has revoked the license of W. Moderious, of the Alameda creamery, according to an announcement made yesterday.

In his reasons for revoking the permit to sell milk in Richmond, Dr. Root stated that Moderious had been granted a permit to sell a certain grade of milk, which was sanctioned by the health department. Later, he alleged, Moderious began buying a lower grade of milk from the county and began distributing it in Richmond.

He held a conference with the milk dealer who denied the charge. Dr. Root investigated and substantiated the charges and warned the milk dealer. The milk dealer continued to distribute the lower grade of milk, although warned several times and the health department then revoked the permit.

British Strike Not An Industrial but Economic Dispute Says Publisher

EDITORS NOTE: Because of his high position, Viscount Burnham is better qualified than any other man in England to state the case for the newspaper publishers of the country. He strenuously resists interference on the part of the mechanical staffs with the editorial policies of newspapers, but his long record of public service reveals him as a staunch friend of the working classes. For five years he presided over the industrial league council, which established the joint councils of employers and employed in England, and also satisfactorily arbitrated the question of school teachers' wages, affecting 180,000 members of the teaching profession.

In the following exclusive statement written for Universal Service, he also authoritatively discloses recent dramatic happenings in the heart of English newspaperdom.

LONDON, May 6.—The present dispute is not, as was asserted in Commons by J. H. Thomas, an industrial dispute at all. It originated as everyone knows, in the economic position of the coal trade, in which both masters and men have been the victims of circumstances.

On the other hand, the plan for a general strike and the organization throughout the country of what in effect is nothing less than civil war is pure political, having as its object the setting up of the trades union congress as a kind of supergovernment.

WOMEN AND LEISURE

American women, an art critic asserts, are in danger of becoming "static dumb bunnies". They fool away in worthless recreation the time that labor-saving devices in the home have placed in their hands. Women who formerly had to spend fourteen hours a day baking, cleaning house, scrubbing floors, cooking and making beds now spend their time in the theatre, at cards, shopping or cabaretting. Only a small minority of them are going in for cultural things!

Well, what would our artist friend do about it? A logical conclusion from his premises is that since they are incapable of profitably employing their new-found leisure, women should be sent back to the kitchen to dive for pearls in the family washtub. One important fact he overlooks is that as far back as 1920 more than 85 million women in this country were engaged in gainful occupation outside the homes. The number of women and especially married women, so employed is constantly increasing. Are they in danger of becoming "static dumb bunnies?"

The whole trend of modern effort is to obtain for both men and women more leisure. Women are quite as capable of profiting by the escape from drudgery as men are, although the latter are apparently reluctant to admit it. They could, but do not, plead their right to some respite, after a thousand generations of domestic slavery. They merely smile at the assumption that theatre-going, cards, shopping and cabaretting are intellectually less stimulating than shooting pool, chasing a pellet around a golf course or sitting all day at the dull end of a fishing rod, as the males of the species have done from time immemorial, while their womenfolk took care of their offspring, scrubbed pots and kettles cooked meals and toted the wigwags. Only the savage-minded begrudge the modern woman her little leisure or criticize the manner in which she employs it.

KENTUCKY CHANGES

The Kentucky anti-gossip law was invoked recently in the case of a man who accused a neighbor of operating a still.

There was no ground for the accusation—at least the officers of the law found none; and the neighbor took revenge under a statute enacted in 1924, which provides heavy penalties for persons indulging in "loose talk" and requires all persons accused under it to reveal the source of their information.

A great change must have come over Kentucky, when citizens regard the accusation of having a still as offensive. A generation ago not to have a still in that state marked a man as socially "queer."

ADJOURNMENT

Congressional adjournment date has now been moved, by general consent, to June 1. House Leader Tilson has not given over his May 15 date, and is still keeping it in reserve, but the general opinion runs that the latter date is the most likely, and in the end, the opportunity to put dustcloths on the capitol furniture may be delayed for a few days after the opening of the June period.

Not one American in ten takes decent care of an automobile; and so it soon goes to pieces, and he feels he is a slave and ground down by plutocracy, unless he has a new one.—F. W. Howe's Monthly.

Score another point for the Mellon plan; seventy-five cent theatre tickets, which have been costing eighty-five are now back to par.

EFFECT OF THE CONSTITUTION

A "more perfect union" was what the country needed, and after much delay a convention of fifty-five members was held in Philadelphia in 1787 for the purpose of drawing up a Constitution. Washington presided, and the state legislature sent their chief men as delegates. The convention held a secret session of nearly four months and had many stormy debates before the articles of the new Constitution could be agreed upon.

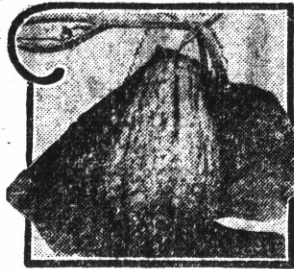

After the new Constitution had been accepted by the Convention, it was sent to the different states to be voted upon by the people. Many were opposed to it, thinking it gave the national government too much power; but, in time all of the states decided to adopt it. Alexander Hamilton of New York did the most to convince the people of the wisdom of such a course. When the city of New York celebrated the adoption of the "Ship of State" or the "Union" Hamilton's name was painted in large letters on the platform upholding the vessel.

The Constitution went into effect in 1789, accomplishing for the country four important objects: It gave the nation a president, whose duty it is to see that the laws are executed; it gave Congress power to raise money by taxation to carry on and defend the government; it gave every citizen of the United States equal rights in all the states, with liberty to buy and sell in all parts of the country, thus securing freedom of trade; it established the Supreme Court of the United States, to decide all questions and disputes about the powers of the national government. Ten very important amendments were added to the Constitution a few years later. They were called a "Bill of Rights" and secured still further protection for the people. And now, to use the words of John Adams, "The thirteen clocks all struck together."

VI. CHAYOTE

Very much like the pig at the slaughter-house, whose every vestige is used in some way or other the chayote is an exceptionally efficient vegetable. Pronounced chayote and close cousin to the cucumber, squash and pumpkin, this semi-tropical plant bears a fruit which somewhat resembles summer squash. The roots also are edible, and the young leaves may be boiled for greens like spinach or dandelions.

The chayote vine is splendid forage for cattle or when dried as straw is utilized for hats, baskets and similar woven articles.

So useful a plant is worth developing and horticulturists believe it may become an important food in this country. Like cucumbers, the chayote requires a warm season and full exposure to the sun. The seed should be sown freely in hills and in soil that is rather hard and coarse. At present its cultivation is largely confined to Florida, California and the southern central states.

EMBROIDERED CURTAINS ARE RICH IN THEIR SIMPLICITY

Dainty Colors and Clever Designs Make Them Charming for Kitchen, Bedroom or Bathroom

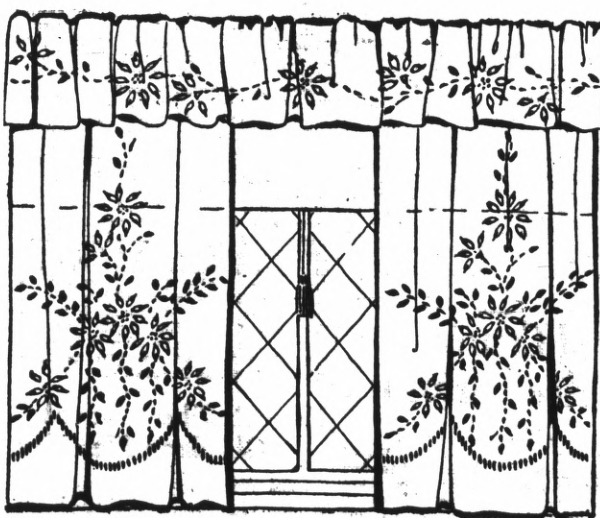

By MONA MULLEN

IN planning new things for the home, do not neglect the curtains. So many lovely effects are achieved by the clever use of curtains that one really does not realize their value, from a decorative standpoint, until they have been once used. Then it seems impossible to do without curtains that show some touch of simple handwork. For the bedroom, the kitchen, or the bathroom the curtains illustrated would be appropriate. Made of unbleached muslin, scrim, crossbarred dimity, or marquisette, according to the room in which they are to be used, the curtains may match the general color scheme, or they may introduce a contrasting but harmonizing color note.

The design furnishes motifs for two pairs of curtains and a valance for one. The border on the valance consists of delicate sprays of leaves and vines, interrupted here and there with a large flower that may be worked in lazy-daisy stitch. In fact, one of the very pleasing things about the entire design is the fact that it can be developed very rapidly and in stitches that are well known to everyone who understands anything at all about needlework. They may even be worked up in outline stitch, if preferred.

For the development of the flowers one has the choice of pink, blue, yellow, or lavender, with yellow and black for the centers. The leaves and stems, of course, should be in green, although a brownish green is effective for the stems. The scallops are pretty outlined with a double line of blue and black. There also come with the transfer some dainty butterfly motifs that may be employed in the decoration of towels and other articles of household linen.

Finished with a tiny edging of lace, the curtains would be lovely for a young girl's room.

Why Girls Go Back Home

CATHARINE BRODY

Copyright 1926 by Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.

"Why Girls Go Back Home" with Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner production from this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Marie Downey, innocently involved in scandal by Clifford Dudley, an actor, climbs to stardom because of the notoriety and for three years lives a gay life with Sally, her chum. Then she invites Clifford to a party and reveals herself by humiliating him before the guests. John, a former sweetheart, visits and tells her she is known in her home town as a prostitute. Indignant, Marie goes back home and tries to make the town making it "eat out of her hand."

CHAPTER XIII—Continued. "But I thought," Marie pointed out reasonably, "that you wanted me to go as soon as possible. Why, you even wanted me to go yesterday, don't you remember, father? And miss the party and all."

Mr. Downey groaned most pitifully. "Why didn't you tell me? If you'd told me about giving the money to the church—that's different. I told you to go for your own good, Marie. Do you think I want a daughter of mine driven out by the Klan, disgraced? If I'd known—and now you run off, now what will I tell them? They'll think it's funny. They'll talk!"

"Oh, fudge! Tell them I've been called back to the show. Tell them New York can't get along without me. Tell 'em anything. What do I care?"

"And don't you care about leaving your old father so soon?" begged Mr. Downey wistfully. "It dering, to this lovely, magnificent dressed creature who had gone from their town to another world. Then the crowd was disturbed by a body forcing its way through, flinging those who stood in the way aside, and John, his hair disordered and his eyes wreathed, stood by the steps. He seized Marie's hand. Oblivious of Mr. Downey and the screeching band, and people all about him, he begged: "Don't go without forgiving me, Marie. I was a fool. I'm a—hypocrite, as you said. But I love you. I always loved you. I always will. Forgive me."

Marie looked down into his eyes. This was what she had been waiting for. But back came a memory of how she had entreated him at her house and how he had turned aside. She could not answer. She only looked at him, while her lips trembled. "You will forgive me? Only forgive me!" he implored. "Only forgive me?" said Marie softly.

The conductor began to yell. "All aboard!"

Porters took him up, showing back children who clung to the train.

John stood speechless before Marie's face. As the train began to jerk, he jumped with it, refusing to relinquish Marie's hand.

"Do you mean—do you mean—"

The train now definitely moved on. Marie's hand dropped. She turned her head back to John and called out his name.

"Come to New York—and see." When she sat back in her compartment, for the first time in years she felt serene, content, at rest. Something had been uneasy within her for a long time. She guessed it was her heart. It was now at peace. For she did not doubt that he would come to New York. She lay back in her seat, closed her eyes, and felt a harassed chapter of a story and another chapter sweetly beginning.

A month from the time that Marie Downey left Winesville, the "Signal" editor received another wire from an enterprising New York reporter. His letter was a whoop and ran to the telephone. "Oh, yes," came Mrs. Ross's voice, fluttering with excitement. "Right, over the wire. I know it all along. But I promised to keep it a secret. Oh, we're delighted. Such a romance! We're going to visit them, as soon as they get a little settled. Young folks, you know. I'm so excited, you must excuse me. I don't know just what I'm saying, but I know it all along. Oh, yes, I'm broken-hearted to have him gone, but it's not like losing him, you know, and he has a good job as a buyer with a New York store. Well, they're living in Marie's house now, but she's going to sell it. They're going to move to the suburbs. I don't know what we mightn't do and join them after a while. Mr. Ross is thinking of retiring, you know—and Marie having no mother—Oh, we're very happy over it."

"And I just want to tell you," Mrs. Ross's voice rose sharply, "about that Clifford Dudley. I just want you to know it was nothing but gossip. She threw him over and he put the papers up to printing that story about her. I'm going to write John that he ought to sue that creature!"

Two days away by train Marie Downey Ross and her young husband were looking their dinner practically untouched. An unfolded evening paper beside John's plate screamed that Marie Downey had married her girlhood sweetheart. They only smiled at it with amusement.

"Great Neck would be a nice place," Marie was saying, "though perhaps a place that was a little more country would be better."

They did not hear the doorbell ring, nor Sally Short, bearing a copy of the paper, close the door behind them. Sally had just moved out of the house into another apartment, upheld by alimony, but as a friend of the family, she could drop in at all hours.

"Won't Great Neck be too far for you to ride in to the show every night?"

They started at the sound of her voice. Marie blushed, but she looked Sally straight in the eye. "I won't always be riding to the show, you know."

Sally glanced from one beautiful face to the other. "I see," she said solemnly, "country air's best for children, isn't it?"

They blushed more furiously than ever.

Sally burst out laughing. But there was approval and even envy in her laughter. She sank to a chair and drew off her hat, preparing for a parting wise crack.

"Why girls go back home!" she pronounced, with a large wave of the hand. "It's not their old homes, why, then, a new one. Bless you, my children!"

John and Marie peeped at each other above the soup and smiled.

SECRETS of a JAPANESE BEAUTY

By Tamaki Hayakawa
("The Japanese Rose")

A JAPANESE woman has a way of saying something which always startles me, for it expresses...

"Beauty is only skin deep," you say. How different from the advice that was so often whispered into my ear when I was being educated in Tokyo: "The road to beauty is five miles long." And how different the scientific theories of health and hygiene that lie hidden in these homely quotations.

You Americans say, "If you would be beautiful, cultivate the surface of the skin." While we Japanese say, "The secret of beauty lies in the pores; there are 6,000,000 of them, and their combined length is five miles."

Perhaps I may be pardoned for recalling that a greater proportion of Japanese women than of any other race are recognized as world-famous beauties. And perhaps I may point out that, while each nation has its own ideal of form and feature, all join in acclaiming a beautiful skin.

What then is our recipe? The secret lies in our manner of cleansing the skin, or rather the pores which, if clean and healthy, supply food and health and vigor and color to the skin.

This is our secret: A clear soap for a clear skin. That is, we avoid thick, coarse, grainy, mealy soaps, for they clog the pores. We use soaps as pure as they are transparent—so pure that they dissolve readily in water, and so pure that they enter the tiniest pores, cleansing them full length.

We prefer a soap that contains one or two natural tonics, to stimulate the healthy temporary tingles that is such a sure sign of healthy pores. And, of course, we prefer a soap that exudes a faint scent of the rose.

as a thought quite contrary to what mothers in Japan have taught their growing daughters since time immemorial.

Marshall Neilan Picture Featured At the California

Another Marshall Neilan picture, "Mike," will be the feature at the California Theatre today and tomorrow. According to reports, Neilan and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer have added another success to their list in this photoplay, which is described as a melodrama that has the added entertainment value of constant humor. In fact it really is a hilarious comedy that has an exciting story, punctuated with many thrills.

There is an unusually strong cast in "Mike." The roster of well-known names includes Charlie Murray, Ford Sterling, William Haines, Muriel Francis Dunn, Junior Caglan, Frankie Darro, Ned Sparks and Sam De Grasse. The title role is played by an utter newcomer to the screen, Sally O'Neill, who is a recent "discovery" by Neilan. It is said that in this, her first picture, Miss O'Neill proves to be a real find.

"Mike" is a return by Neilan to the form of photoplay in which he excels. His quick wit, his delightful comedy sense and his ability to devise and work out naturally many extremely laughable situations is given full play in this picture. The director wrote the story himself, but in injecting a running fire of comedy into the picture Neilan has not neglected to build up the excitement and dramatic power of the engrossing plot, which deals with the life of a desert railroad section boss and his family who live in a quaintly appointed box car.

Other features on the same program include O. Henry's story "Elsie in New York," Koko's song "Car-tune," "Ta-Ra-Ta-Boom-Dee-Dee," "International News."

Special added attraction, tonight and Saturday evening Dainty Little Helen Marie Talph in "Song and Dance Surprises," assisted by Larry Canelo, at the organ.

ROSEN MURDER IS MYSTERY TO GERMAN POLICE

(By Universal Service)

BERLIN, May 6. The murder of Professor Felix Rosen, noted botanist of Breslau, and brother of a former German foreign minister, seems destined to remain forever one of the unsolved mysteries before which the art of the detective capitulates.

After seven months of painstaking investigation, after numerous arrests and endless questioning, after even going in desperation even so far as to seize the confidential documents of the accused, the prosecutor has been forced to acknowledge failure, to release the principals whom he has held in jail ever since murder last August and to clear them of all suspicion.

The investigation did reveal, however, a remarkable case of a dual personality. A Dr. Jekyll-Mr. Hyde existence that has startled the whole academic world of Germany.

His Double Life

For Professor Rosen, during the day the highly esteemed, learned professor of the gentle science of botany, turned at the fall of night into a riotous liver who with the aid of characters of the underworld staged weird orgies at his villa, recalling the most decadent days of Athens and Rome. The police now believe that the murder was committed by some of the shady characters who took part in these orgies, though neither their identity nor their motives can be even guessed at.

When the murder occurred, suspicion fell immediately on Professor Rosen's housekeeper, Miss Neumann, who had kept house for him for twenty years, whom he had taken in when she was a girl of the streets, and from whom he had a daughter, since married. Miss Neumann was arrested but denied any connection with murder.

She said that during the murder night, several unidentified men had invaded the professor's villa, had killed the porter, named Stock, had then invaded the professor's bedroom and had shot him dead. When she heard the shots, she said, she made a rope of her bed linen, let herself down in the yard and hid in the rabbit stable till police arrived.

Suspects Released

Despite numerous circumstances that seemed to speak against this version, chief of which was the maid, who also slept in the house, had heard nothing of the murders tearing through the house the police had to acknowledge Miss Neumann's version as correct and to release her.

Together with her were released Erich Stock and his wife, son and daughter-in-law of the murdered porter, who were held for months in connection with the affair.

The daughter of Miss Neumann and her husband were also questioned repeatedly, but could prove their innocence.

Several characters of the underworld with whom Professor Rosen is believed to have been in touch are still being held, but it's doubtful whether, after the release of the chief accused and admitted inability of police to clear up the murder, they will ever be brought to trial.

NEW YORK-CHICAGO CABLE UNITES CITIES FIRST LINKED BY LONG DISTANCE IN 1892

THE first inter-city telephone line was built between Boston and Lowell. It was constructed by Charles J. Glidden, later of world-fame, and so successful was it that the early telephone officials began to look further afield. A line from Boston to Providence was projected, a distance of forty-five miles. At first this new line was a failure, but John J. Curry developed the metallic circuit and the line became a success. Then was launched a more ambitious project, the joining of New York and Boston by telephone.

Upon the completion of the New York-Boston line the American Telephone and Telegraph Company was organized to develop Long Distance telephone lines between the principal cities of the country. A line between New York and Philadelphia was projected immediately began to connect New York and Buffalo. This was finally accomplished in the fall of 1888, but telephone engineers were not satisfied. Their ultimate dream was to build a telephone line that would connect the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, but first of all they looked forward to connecting New York and Chicago by telephone.

On October 18, 1892, Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, opened the line between New York and Chicago. Nearly a quarter of a century elapsed, however, before the range of transmission spanned the continent, but with the opening of the Chicago line, people in general began to realize that it was a question of time only, and the use of the Long Distance telephone became more general. People and business houses began to depend more and more upon this service.

But there was one fly in the ointment. The elements—rain, snow, sleet, floods and tornadoes—were no respecter of persons, nor of things. A severe storm often interfered with the service, in fact, it sometimes entirely disrupted it. One single sleet storm might cause millions of dollars damage. So the telephone engineers set out to work on another problem and, like the many that preceded it, they solved it. Gradually the open wire circuits were supplanted by aerial cable, and last summer an entire aerial cable line was completed between New York and Chicago and placed in service. This new line, representing one of the latest and most important developments in telephony, is virtually free from storm damage and particularly from sleet storms. As it stands completed, it gives assurance of a service capable of being expanded to meet future needs.

Syd Chaplin Is Rival of His Famous Brother

Charlie Chaplin has a rival. None other than his brother Syd, who has just leaped to a front place in the ranks of the screen comedians with one of the cleverest comedy characterizations of the screen. Syd has a leading role in Thomas H. Ince's new laugh sparkler, "The Galloping Fish." With the aid of Louise Fazenda, Ford Sterling and Chester Conklin, he has put over some of the biggest laughs that have been "piled" by a comedian in many a day. The Ince comedy, a First National release, will be shown at the Richmond Theatre today and tomorrow. Newlyweds have furnished laughs ever since comedy was invented but Syd plays the role of the prize comic newlywed in Ince's fish tale. "Freddy Weatherill" is his name, and when he quarrels with his bride of a few months and goes off in a huff to the theatre, seeking oblivion and consolation, he puts himself into twenty-four hours of the most hilariously complicated situations that one author, two continually writers and four brilliant "gag" men could devise.

A "Diving Venus" with a trained seal that a cruel sheriff is seeking to attach brings about the chief complications. "Freddy," as a friend of Venus's manager and finance, is dragged into the plot and made chief guardian of the seal, who is smuggled from the theatre on an ambulance stretcher. When the seal comes to life as a fish wagon passes and leaps through the streets and into the crowded lobby of a smart hotel, pursued by the party "Freddy," the laughs begin. They continue through seven reels that wind up with some spectacular flood scenes—and frightened "Freddy" dashing about in a motor boat and saving everyone, including the seal, of which he has a deadly fear.

Other features include "For Sadie's Sake," a Jimmie Adams comedy; "Felix Uses His Head," a Felix the cat cartoon.

Patterns of Progress

AN AMERICAN home—its bathtub, breakfast foods, furnace—set down in the heart of Europe would be unmistakably an American home. An American man—the cut of his coat, the tie of his tie, the comb of his hair—walking the streets of Europe is in all his obvious tastes an American.

Advertisements stamp American homes and owners of homes with a kind of national pattern. They create desire for the same kind of things; make particular people know and want the most advanced of things. Homes—what to put in homes. People—how to dress, nourish, entertain the people. Offices—how to equip and operate offices. They set America right about radios and talcums—tell businessmen, housewives, government officials how to brush their teeth!

We cut the pattern of our personal lives and surroundings from advertisements. We keep modern only with their intimate help. We go forward with them, as we would stand still without them. We form our tastes and discriminate values by using their truths. Advertisements offer us patterns of progress that mean quick steps to the fore.

Keep pace with progress by reading the advertisements every day

Japanese Believe League of Nations Will Soon Fall

(By Universal Service)

TOKIO, May 6.—The great tower symbolizing human hypocrisy which the Great World Struggle has constructed will crumble to its very foundation of its own accord.

This is the striking sentence in which the Tokio Nichi Nichi, an influential newspaper, expresses its opinion of the recent conference of the League of Nations at Geneva which ended in failure to bring about the admission of Germany to the league. While more outspoken than most of her contemporaries, the Nichi Nichi declares that the prevailing opinion of the Japanese press that the league by the Geneva fiasco, the usefulness of the league, according to a majority opinion of Japanese newspapers, has been finally ended by the attempts European statesmen have made to Europeanize the league.

"The dispute at Geneva has, no doubt, made the League of Nations discredited," the Nichi Nichi declares. "If it is discredited it will not be long before the League of Nations goes out of existence."

Invoking curses
The newspapers and statesmen of Europe have been invoking a curse upon the League of Nations, which indicates their mean-mindedness in undertaking to lay the blame upon others. It is extraordinary to behold that the brunt of the curse is directed against Brazil instead of at Great Britain and France. This is indisputable evidence that they are hypocritical in the League of Nations is doomed to self destruction."

For purely selfish reasons, the Nichi Nichi asserts, the statesmen of Europe tried to make it appear that the Locarno treaties were intended to insure the peace of the world and therefore were an international undertaking. They were trying, the paper claims, to insure the peace of Europe at the expense of the whole world. The Locarno Pact, it is declared, has nothing to do with the guiding principles upon which the league was founded.

"We shall not dwell upon the question of whether it would have been wise to designate Brazil as a permanent councillor," continues the Nichi Nichi, "but we do assert that the political operations used to repel the permanent council of that nation were extremely absurd and unfair. The European statesmen insist that Brazil is in no way entitled to interfere in the affairs of Europe because she is under the protection of the Monroe Doctrine."

Bold Advice
"We resolutely object to the policy that Europe is for Europeans because nothing is more absurd than such a claim. It is unpardonable wrong that they impose heavy taxes upon the whole world."

Mrs. Stillman Discusses Mental Process by Which She and Her Husband Were Brought Together

(By Universal Service)

NEW YORK, May 6.—Mrs. Anna U. Stillman today discussed the mental processes by which it was possible for her and her husband to become reconciled after five years of wrangling in the courts. "It is easier to forgive and forget when one refuses to cherish old resentments," she said. "All resentments must be brushed out of the mind like dust out of a room."

"Life, when you get down to the deepest things in you isn't a matter of hearts of flowers. People think too often that their sentiments and motives are sweet Marguerites and dear little daisy birds. Instead, these instincts are raging lions and stealthy panthers that roar and attack when we don't expect it. Now when you ask me what becomes of ranking resentment, lingering suspicion, jealousy—all the ghosts that might loiter in the corridors of one's mind, I can only say that we must work out those 'resistances' in the deepest recesses of our beings."

"We must go deep to understand our relationships for they are all different. The relationships to which they propose wasting the proceeds exclusively upon their own affairs."

A most important result, as the Nichi Nichi sees it, of the Geneva debacle, has been to alienate further American sentiment toward the league. "There is great danger," the Nichi Nichi concludes, "that American psychology will affect other nations."

Parliament Planning to Use Force

period, and for its enforcement, by penalties.

"No man who does his duty loyally to his country in the present crisis will be left unprotected by the state against subsequent repression."

The die-hards in the government were apparently never more determined on any policy than in their attitude to resist the union demands. On the other hand the union organizations appear to be functioning perfectly and reports indicate that the strike is growing. The official statement from the strike headquarters says: "The third day of the general strike sees the situation unchanged. The working class is holding tenaciously to the position it has taken up. The assurance of the anti-labor people that it would be over in a few days and that the government would find ample volunteers to run trains have vanished entirely."

The workers are growing more determined. They are not drifting back to work. On the contrary the trouble everywhere is to keep those men at work who have not yet been ordered to strike.

"Train service remains a skeleton. The mines are still. Traffic in goods has ceased. The streets are closed and the factories are closing."

Organized workers are solid, disciplined and calm and will refuse to let industry resume until justice is done to their fellows."

The number of union men heading the strike call is declared by the unions to represent approximately three millions of a total strength of four millions. These are divided into eleven groups as follows:

- 1.—Mining and quarrying.
- 2.—Railways.
- 3.—Transport other than railways.
- 4.—Shipbuilding.
- 5.—Engineering, founding and vehicle building.
- 6.—Iron, steel and minor metal trades.
- 7.—Building, woodworking and furnishings.
- 8.—Printing and paper distribution, etc.
- 9.—Shop assistants.
- 10.—Public employees.
- 11.—General laborers, including the municipal workers' union.

The textile workers are in a group not yet called out. Conditions prevailing in London are declared to be representative of the situation in centers of population throughout the country. Practically no business is being done. Few buses are in operation and they are carrying police guards with the motors protected by wrappings of barbed wire.

All traffic rules have been suspended, adding much to the confusion and congestion in the main thoroughfares. Many people as can climb on top of a bus, or get inside, or find a foothold, are permitted to ride.

Remove all traffic regulations along Broadway and Fifth avenue, New York, between 23rd and 58th streets, and fill these thoroughfares with every kind of slow going and fast moving vehicles and surging pedestrians, and you will have an accurate picture of the Strand and Piccadilly.

One trolley car traversed the Thames Embankment under guard of the police, but few passengers ventured aboard. The subway service today was about twenty-five per cent normal. Taxicabs have almost entirely disappeared from the streets.

Conflicts between the police and the crowd throughout the country lead to many wild rumors, but the only death known to have occurred was that of a man struck by a motorbus which got out of control when attacked in the Southward district of London.

Light and power have been rationed for the food industries and other vital necessities.

Throughout the national crisis the Stock Exchange has held remarkably steady. With no spectacular fall of prices or increase in money rates.

The determination of the government to stifle all seditious utterances was shown by the jailing of Shapurji Saklatvala, Communist member of Parliament, for two months today.

Lord Stamfordham, the King's secretary, visited No. Ten Downing street this afternoon with a notice from the King that he thought it advisable to call off the Royal Courts for May 12 and 14 at which many American debutantes were to have been presented to their majesty.

The House of Commons spent the day in political debate over the emergency regulations without any move being made towards peace. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York were again spectators. Early in the day it was understood that Lloyd George conferred with strike leaders seeking a way to peace, but nothing materialized. Former Premier MacDonald, whose health is bad, has almost broken down under the strain of the situation and was unable to project his personality into the battle.

Leaders of Auto Theft Ring Taken

(By Universal Service)

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—Announcement that in the arrest of Edwin King, alias Krug, in King City, Monterey county, last night, the man responsible for the theft of one hundred automobiles in Los Angeles and San Francisco within the last few months had been captured was made here today by the chief bureau of the National Automobile club.

On information furnished police by the automobile club, King was taken into custody late last night. A companion, Guy Depew, escaped. The capture ended a five-day intensive search during which Lieutenant Bernard McDonald of the San Francisco police department and M. L. Britt of the club were hot in the trail of the pair.

Both men were the heads of a theft ring which after operating in Los Angeles transferred its activities to San Francisco, the club announcement said. King and Depew Barley escaped in Los Angeles when King's wife blocked a pursuing police car and submitted herself to arrest. Two other members of the alleged ring, Tony Russo and Hank Williams, were arrested with her.

King and Depew, according to the automobile club announcement, broke jail from Birmingham, N. Y., some time ago after slugging a jailer.

Compromise On Farm Bills Is to be Attempted by New Bill of Representative Aswell

(By ARTHUR HACHTEN)

(By Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, May 6.—An attempt to strike a compromise between the supporters of the Haugen Farmers' Subsidy Bill and the Tinscher Administration Bill, was made by Rep. James B. Aswell (D., Louisiana), today when he announced that he will offer an amendment to his bill so as to permit loans to farmers' organizations totalling $110,000,000.

As the Aswell bill stands before the house, it carries only $10,000,000 to be loaned to farmers' cooperative marketing associations for the purpose of perfecting their organizations.

How he proposed to add $100,000,000 to be loaned for the purpose of stabilizing prices through orderly marketing of crops, he declared on the floor of the house.

That the Democratic forces would unite in opposition to the Tinscher bill which provides for a federal board to lend $100,000,000 to farmers at interest, was predicted in many quarters.

Coupled with the farm bloc opposition from middle west republicans, this combination was believed to have sufficient votes to kill the administration measure. The Tinscher bill provides that the president shall appoint a federal farm board from nominees selected by farmers' organizations.

Aswell's bill stipulates that the board to handle the federal funds shall be named by farmers' organizations and not be subject to approval by the president of the senate.

"I believe that the farmers would prefer to have their own board to handle the loans and also to aid them in perfecting their marketing work," said Aswell.

The Haugen bill authorizing appropriation of $250,000,000 to be loaned to farmers without assurance that it shall be repaid, was bitterly attacked by Aswell as being "wicked and socialistic."

"Enact the Haugen bill and you take the first step that has brought disaster in England—government subsidy," declared Aswell.

REFINERY TEAM DEFEATS BARREL HOUSE NINE 3 TO 1

TWO HOMERUNS FEATURE CLOSE CONTEST HERE

Ernest Peters and Snively
Gather in Circuit Clouts for Their Teams

The fans who were aching to see a real home-run saw two of them yesterday afternoon when the Refinery defeated the Barrel House by a score of 3-1. Snively got the first circuit clout with Bartram on base, one run in and two men out in the third inning. Jack's clout cleared the fence like a sky-rocket.

The next gentleman to gather a healthy circuit over the right field fence was Ernest Peters of the Barrel House "congregation" who gathered his in the fourth inning. No fooling, Lefty Cottrhan and plenty of stuff on the ball and slammed them in, fast and furious. In the seven innings Cottrhan sent ten men to the benches by the strikeout route.

Wolfman, backed by wonderful support buried himself out of some beautiful pitches. Especially in the last of the seventh inning when it looked as if the Barrel House would start a seventh inning rally. But not so, good support prevailed. The play by play for each inning:

SYLVESTER AND FARREN MEET THIS EVENING

Frankie Farren of San Francisco and Eddie Sylvester of Los Angeles, crack 135 pounders, are fit and ready for their six round encounter in the main event of tonight's boxing show at Winters pavilion.

Farren has been a figurehead among Pacific Coast lightweights for the last half dozen years, and in the youthful Eddie Sylvester he will meet a worthy foe, who will extend the hard punching San Francisco to the limit. Sylvester showed a sample of his flistic prowess here in Richmond, when he held the clever Benny Vierra to a well earned eight round draw, a few months ago. He also has decisions over Tommy Richards, Young Papke, Young Harry Wills, southern light weight stars. Willis has a victory over Penny Valger. Farren is so well known to local boxing followers, that it is of little use to recount his ring record.

Young Pancho Villa, good Oakland flyweight, will meet Paddy Wheeler in the six round semi-windup. Wheeler is under the management of Alec Greggains of San Francisco, and Alec sends word that his charge will more than meet the hustling Villa, more than half way tonight. Villa has beaten such boys as Bobby Mars, Frisco Lenda, and McKey Britton. Jimmy West of Oakland, who made a big hit here when he defeated the tough and hard punching Cyclone Pete Morton at the last show on the program with Joe Limas of El Cerrito. The boys weigh 142 pounds, and are expected to furnish a fast go.

Cesar Bertone and Danny Garcia, both of Richmond, 118 pounders and Bud Kariv and Young Salcido, 135 pounders, round out the card.

Harry Eagles, promoter, reports a large advance sale of tickets, indicating that quite a gathering will witness the gladiators perform tonight. Frankie Neil, ex-bantamweight champion of the world will referee.

Brick Deveraux will announce the contestants. The first bout will start at 8:30, tonight.

Registrations of Cars On Increase For This Year

SACRAMENTO, May 6.—An index to California's continued prosperity was given today in figures released by Will H. Marsh, Chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles, showing that $6,558,273.15 was collected in registration fees during the first three months of this year.

Registrations of motor vehicles and trailers for the period total 1,388,932 divided as follows: Automobiles, 1,175,238; solid trucks, 36,941; pneumatic trucks, 145,430; motorcycles, 7,588; trailers, 22,735. The records show 75,091 transfers were made during the period.

While the greater part of the cars registered are renewals of licenses many are new cars and the speed with which last year's total is being reached led Marsh to predict that registrations for 1926 will increase at least 100,000 over last year.

Because of the change this year in the time of license renewal the division was able to reduce its payroll materially in March, the total being $46,235.74 as against $60,252.05 for last year.

KEYS TO PLAY KELSEYVILLE

Sunday will see the fast Richmond Key baseball nine go up against Kelseyville team at Lake county, in what is expected to be a humdinger of a game.

Nemith will be on the mound for the local team and if his speed is as good as it was last Sunday, when he shut the Port Costa team out, 3-0 there, there is no danger of the Keys coming through at the small end of the score.

Championship Tennis Match Here Sunday

A match to decide the tennis championship of Richmond will be staged on Sunday when A. K. Henman and L. S. Fish meet at the city hall court. The match is sponsored by the Richmond Tennis club and it should prove one of the most interesting ever staged on the courts.

To Complete New Wharf Next Week

no oil cargos will be loaded at this wharf which will give the city the opportunity of building for the fruit and lumber trade heretofore shipped from other ports because of the oil cargoes objected to by shippers.

The Eastbay Water company is laying a pipe line to the wharf connecting with the main on Tenth street and Main avenue. These improvements are expected to be completed within a month.

When the spur track is constructed to the harbor, all obstacles will have been removed and the inner harbor will begin developing. A number of ships have already signified their intention of shipping cargoes from the new municipal wharf.

The contract for Municipal Wharf No. 2 was let on October 19 and practically seven months have been required for the construction. Prior to the letting of the contract, the harbor was dredged to a depth of twenty-four feet and a turning basin was provided at the end of the channel.

According to the plans of the railroad company, there will be a single track constructed to the wharf with a switch capable of handling cars, doing away with the necessity of switching cars on the main track and thereby increasing the efficiency of handling the cargoes for the port.

DEMOCRATS TO MEET SATURDAY

Delegates to the State Democratic convention to be held at Santa Cruz on May 18, will be elected at a meeting to be held in the Lincoln school auditorium tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. All Contra Costa Democrats are urged to be present.

Members of the State Central committee are expected to be present at the meeting tomorrow. At the Santa Cruz convention, Democratic candidates for State offices will be endorsed.

USE THE HAIR BRUSH ADVISES CHILD EXPERT

RIVERSIDE, May 6.—Lax discipline in the modern home and the divorce problem are responsible for juvenile delinquency, according to Dr. Eva C. Reid, child training expert of the University of California who addressed the California Federation of Women's Clubs in session here today.

To maintain child discipline Dr. Reid advocated a return to the "wood shed and hair brush methods" of the days of our grandmothers.

"There is little danger of destroying a child's spirit and inhibiting by the proper application of the hair brush at the proper time," Dr. Reid said.

The training experts declared that eighty per cent of delinquency among children is due to the divorce problem.

General Conference Of M. E. Church South in Session

(By Universal Service)

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 6.—As the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South started into its real routine today after the pronouncement of the bishop yesterday the air was surcharged with conjecture on the big questions that are expected momentarily to appear. The question of unity with the Methodist Episcopal Church North and whether or not the body will reaffirm its faith in the old form and not recognize the modernist spirit of clinging to fundamentalism.

All signs point to the latter reaffirmation which will come it is believed probably when the new bishop is nominated. If a modernist is nominated and doubtless one will be it will be the signal for the contest with the fundamentalists.

Consideration of the first constitution of the church involving possible revolutionary changes in church organization will be taken up by the twentieth general conference next Tuesday it was decided today.

Abolition of the phrase "I believe in the Holy Catholic Church" in the church creed and substitution of "I believe in Christ's Holy Church" a change once passed by a general conference but vetoed by the College of Bishops was introduced from the Florida conference today.

Strike Effects The U. S. Says Representative

By WILLIAM F. KOPP

Representative from Iowa and Chairman of the House Committee on Labor

(Written for Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, May 6.—The English strike is a matter of great interest to the American people. We know that grave issues are involved and we realize that the consequences may be momentous.

The charge that the laboring people of England are Communists and Bolsheviks cannot be sustained. English labor has always been of a conservative type and I do not believe that the character of the English people has changed. The laboring people of England are just as loyal to their country as the great capitalists.

I sincerely hope that the present conflict will be short lived and that it will be succeeded by a long era of industrial peace. All sides should show a fair and conciliatory spirit.

The present situation cannot be cured by hot heads or hot words.

British Strike Not An Industrial But Economic Dispute

The case of the newspapers is an example in point. The newspaper trade of the country is not run on a pure commercial basis. Vast sums of money are put into it with mixed objects, and all classes of mechanical labor have received, and are still receiving, peak wages, that is to say, about three times the pre-war rate, although the cost of living at the present date is only sixty five per cent higher than in 1914.

The basic wage of the linotype operator is paid at an average of $5.25 per day under the London agreement, yet there has been trouble in the trade for some time mainly because of the desire of certain industrial unions to interfere with editorial control.

This comes from the belief that revolutionary propaganda can not have much effect unless the press is either muzzled or collared. There is no doubt that it is literally true that the trades union congress knew nothing of the incidents which culminated in the shutting down of several papers early this week. This was done, not because of any trade dispute, but in order to get hold of public opinion through the medium of the press.

The unions began operations two or three days before the time fixed for the general strike. One or two offices gave way to a demand that advertisements giving the addresses of secretaries of organizations for the maintenance of supplies should be withdrawn.

The main attack was made on the Daily Mail on Sunday night when the printers' national body demanded the withdrawal of an editorial headed, "For the King and Country."

Subsequently, the Evening Standard and Evening News were stopped. Monday, before the notices actually had expired. The Times and Daily Telegraph were stopped because they intended to insert police notices calling for volunteers for the special constabulary. All in turn refused to surrender editorial control to the machine men.

In effect, it was intended to establish what really would have been Soviet government in the newspaper offices. To this, British newspaper publishers would never agree.

Yesterday, again, the trades unions came forward with an offer to allow publication of the newspapers, provided they would accept unaltered two columns of labor propaganda in each issue. Very properly, the editors refused in plain terms to have anything to do with such a proposition.

I contend that this is a question which concerns the press of the whole world, but more especially the press of English-speaking countries.

The British publishers maintain that their contracts with the mechanics and operators of all classes is for manual labor. The operators are neither responsible nor accountable for the editorial policy of the newspapers.

In my office, and I believe in most other offices, no journalist has ever been called upon to write anything contrary to his principles and beliefs. But the mechanical staff has nothing to do with the formulation of opinions in any shape.

The mechanics are not obliged and still less to purchase it, to read the paper, AetN adm.

Supposing this censorship of the press by trades union branches were to be recognized. When the whole value of the press for national purposes would disappear, the press would become merely the organ of a class. It could publish under duress at any time, and thus become merely the instrument of revolutionary propaganda under circumstances such as those through which we are now passing.

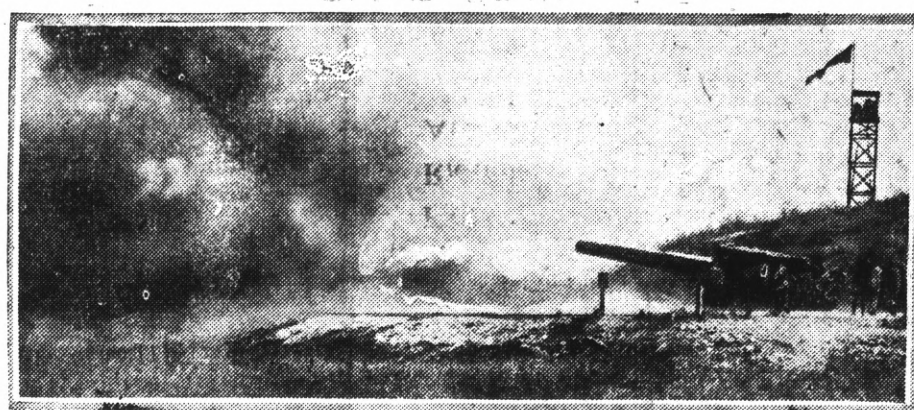

It was said by Erskine, the great advocate of a century ago, that the freedom of the press is the basic freedom of all. We have always held this view most strongly in English-speaking countries, and any attempt to establish tyranny of a special class will be resisted to the last.

The government is now providing "The British Gazette" for exposition of the government's policy. It may be interesting to state that the term "The London Gazette" was suggested in the first instance, but this had become by usage limited to certain formal notices which had to be published by the government in order to secure validity, and the title was subsequently changed.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Winston Spencer Churchill has been taking a considerable part in the organization of "The British Gazette," and the government commandeered the offices and machinery of the Morning Post for its purpose.

This morning 550,000 copies of "The British Gazette" were published and circulated throughout the country. The Times published a four page paper of its usual size, and the Daily Telegraph 60-000 copies of a small edition, while the Daily Mail brought over a quarter-million copies of its edition.

The Times was the only paper which was published from its own offices, but yesterday an attempt was made to set fire to it by pouring on petrol and the members of its staff were assaulted.

This is merely what might have been expected before proper police protection was organized for the press.

The government is allowing the Daily Herald to publish an edition called "The British Worker," but should this organ become active in any active sense it will be stopped.

The struggle is for the time being a very severe one, and the losses inflicted on the community are beyond computation, not so much in regard to the time which has elapsed as in regard to the time which lies before us. Still it must now be settled whether this country is to be ruled by a Soviet of the trades union congress, or by a government which represents the nation as a committee responsible to the representatives of the nation in parliament.

I do not believe the vast majority of the working people are other than loyal and peaceful. The coal position has been exploited by extremists in touch with Moscow for their own ends.

As is generally known, many trades union leaders and branch officers are men who hold extreme opinions by no means in accordance with those held by the average trades unionist. But those leaders and officers enjoy tremendous power because, to use the workman's own phrase: "They always serve it up hot." That is why the present movement is so dangerous and desperate.

But I have no doubt that in the issue which it now devolves upon the British people to meet and solve the sanity and steadfastness of the British character will once more be justified.

The pity is that there will be a legacy of ill-will left which may not easily be liquidated.

Representative Lauds Plan to Hold Girl Camps

By REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM C. WRIGHT

Democratic Member of the House Committee on Military Affairs, from Georgia.

(Written for Universal Service) WASHINGTON, May 6.—The suggestion of military training camps for girls, as submitted to the President by Miss Helen Moloney of Brooklyn is splendid. I favor it heartily. Certainly if these camps have proven good things for our boys—and they unquestionably have—then they will be good things for our girls.

Our women play a vitally important part in wars. Always they have borne much of the burden thereof. But modern warfare makes them far more important and immediate factors in prosecuting a war to success than they have been in the past.

In other days, for the most part they remained in the rear—looked after the homes, looked after the things near at hand. Nowadays, they must go right to the front as nurses, as entertainers and contributors to the morale and patriotic fervor of the men who must do the actual fighting. They are of priceless value and help.

Mrs. Ellen Clarke, 1218 Chanslor avenue has returned from a visit to Arizona.
